Still life painting inspired by Henri Matisse's painting 'Daisies'

For our first lesson, after learning about the life of Henri Matisse, the children chose objects to put on the table to paint, then mixed colours and used their observation skills to create their own still life painting based on the early work of Henri Matisse.

"When I mix up different colours I make new colours!"

"I like bright colours like Matisse."

"We chose different objects to put on our table to paint. We had flowers the same as Matisse though."

Collage turtles inspired by Henri Matisse's 'The Snail'

After recreating 'The Snail' from ripping coloured card in our 2nd lesson, the children developed their skills to create a turtle using the ripping technique on tissue paper.

We showed lots of enthusiasm for learning!

"Collage is fun and relaxing."

"It's good to learn ripping instead of using scissors all the time. It's interesting."

"I'm proud of my work!"

Our finished pieces.

Art

Cut out pictures inspired by Henri Matisse.

After studying Matisse's cut out pictures, where he used a variety of bright colours and shapes, similar to those in the earlier pieces we studied, the children chose a piece of coloured card for their background and then selected a range of coloured shapes to create their own images.

"Some shapes are easier to cut out than others!"

"I like that he uses bright colours. It makes me feel happy!"

"Art is fun!"

Paper weaving

For our final lesson we took our new paper manipulative skills and turned them to weaving. We chose different colours to create a woven mat. Everyone concentrated so hard the room was silent!

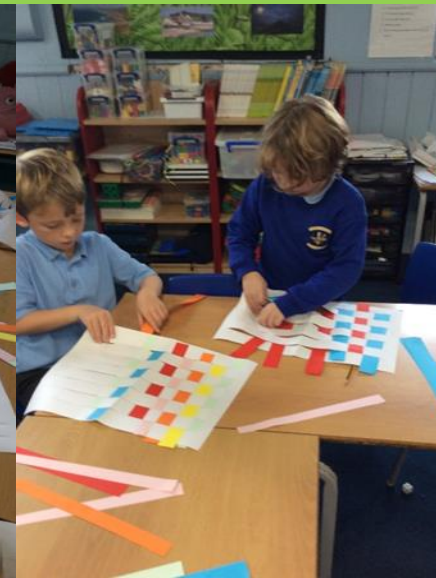

"I'm making a repeated pattern!"

"Weaving is harder than I thought. It needs lots of thinking time."

"You have to concentrate to make sure you go under and over to make a pattern."

"I like that different ways to use paper in art."
